

The current lack of public discussion over the subject of media oligopolies should be a sign that the greater concentration of ownership of the means of distribution of news and information has already impacted access to a free and clear debate. If I were a media company, I sure would not run a headline story about the validity of my company's business practices. So who will now?